About Us

Portofino's was originally situated on Pilgrim Street, from 1983 until 2000.

Since then we have been situated here at 12 Mosley Street.

The building is grade II listed and was built in 1891. It was one of 27 branches of the Prudential Assurance Company, all of which were designed by prolific 19th century architect Alfred Waterhouse.

Alfred Waterhouse also designed the Natural History Museum in London and many other government, educational and commercial buildings, across the United Kingdom.

The interior is lined with faïence tiles, which were produced by old firm "Burmantofts Pottery" from Leeds.

In 1879 Mosley Street became the first street in the world to be lit by the incandescent light bulb, thanks to local inventor Joseph Swan.
